JUDGING DAIRY CATTLE

"The Propriety of Judging Dairy Cattle By Conformation"

A Paper Written By G. A. Boger, of Fulton County and Published in The Agricultural Student of April 1915

In the early days of dairying the only merits on which a cow was selected by those unacquainted with her production, were her physical characteristics. The results of this selection was the breeding of cows of good dairy type and conformation rather than individual production of milk and butter fat. However, this standard of dairy type was supposed to correlate very closely to the milk producing qualities of cows which was true to a large extent, and it has been largely on those standards that the high producing cow of today has been developed.

The dairy cow must be considered as a machine for the production of milk and butter fat in large quantities and for a long period of time. If this machine is correctly assembled there is no reason why the cow should not reach the limit of milk production. It has been found that there are certain physical characteristics which enable the cow to perform these functional duties. Although these essentials have been determined after long years of experience with dairy cattle they are not as accurately known as they should be to make dairy cow selection by conformation absolute.

No one can refute the fact that selection by conformation is very valuable but yet it is necessary that one use conservatism in the use of this method. In order to point out this necessity let us look at the production of some of the best cows. In the show ring the Island type of Jersey is found to be far superior to the American type of Jersey, the latter showing an inferiority in quality and breed type but having a larger size and greater digestive capacity. In fact the judge recognizes only the Island type in the show ring, but nevertheless the American type holds most of the high production records for the Jersey breed.

In the Guernsey herd at the Anna Dean Farm is a large number of high producing cows with records of seven hundred to nine hundred pounds. Here we find also the cow, Murne Cowan, which has recently broken the world's record by producing 1098.18 pounds of butter fat one year. When comparing these cows with the generally accepted standards of dairy types we take particular notice of the withers. These parts are very heavy and well rounded and the animals are generally termed deficient at this point. Yet this is true of nearly all of the high producing cows in the herd, even of Murne Cowan herself.

Another instance is a cow of the Holstein-Friesian breed, Crown Princess Maxie De Kol 2nd. This cow is under test at the present time in Ohio and in the last 120 days of her test produced 463 pounds of butter fat and 10,260 pounds of milk. In the fourth month of her lactation period she carried extraordinarily good fleshing, particularly on the rump, for which the dairy cow judge would criticize her severely.

Many other cases might be cited of cows with very good production records that are extremely faulty in conformation. But although dairy judging may fall in these particular cases, nevertheless this point of selection needs careful consideration. High producing cattle, as a rule, conform very closely to the important standards laid down by the judge and the foregoing illustrations have only been mentioned to point out the necessity of conservatism in the selection of cows by their physical characteristics. We should not be influenced too greatly by such minor defects of the so-called "type" of dairy cow.

There are a few points which all good cows have in common and which may be taken almost absolutely as a good sign of milk production. These are the development of the udder, the capacity of the barrel and the indications of constitutional vigor which the cow shows. If a cow is good in these points it is hardly advisable to discredit her on any other points as far as being a good producer is concerned. Since the official testing of cows has come into practice the value of type selection has decreased. Yet it still finds an important place from the fact that there are comparatively few cows with production records. Even if a cow does have a production record, one does not always know the conditions under which it was made and, therefore, does not know exactly what value to place on the record.

In considering the utility of the dairy cow, her production of milk and butter fat is not all that must be considered. She must also be a good producer of calves and be able to transmit her abilities to her offspring. If a cow is a good producer and extremely lacking in dairy type it is hardly probable that she will transmit her ability to her progeny. A certain degree of symmetry is compatible with relatively high production. The breeders of the past who have sought a combination of symmetry and production have been the successful breeders in the long run. Therefore, one must select cows with good dairy type if he wishes to prolong the production of his herd into the offspring of his cows.

Outside of the economical functions of production the breeder must secure animals that "show off" to good advantage in order to have them sell readily. Bulls especially require good conformation in order to make ready sales. With some farmers the importance of income from breeding stock is greater than that from milk or butter sales.

The final result of selection should be a combination of the two methods; namely, type and production. Too great emphasis of either one with neglect of the other will certainly bring disastrous results in the development of the herd.

AN INDUSTRY RELATED TO AGRICULTURE

Ohio Agricultural Lime and Ground Limestone interests were the first manufacturers to see the vast importance of their products to Agriculture. The quality of Ohio Limes and Limestone is widely and favorably known for she has been a large producer of Lime of the highest grade for a great many years, during which time there has been many changes for the benefit of man.

These interests have built our roads; they have purified our drinking water, have aided in the production of steel and concrete for our buildings, street railway systems, railroads, etc., to say nothing of the amount that goes to the sugar industry, the tanning industry and the chemical industry—all closely related to agriculture.

In addition to the above uses a large amount goes out each year in the various spraying mixtures, which are used to combat insect and fungus diseases, thereby, producing fruits, vegetables and plants which are healthy, when in that condition they make wholesome food. Yet there are many farmers who do not fully realize the value of lime to the art of successful growing. Many of them are near to the largest rock grinding quarries in the United States, yet have never used any of this material upon their lands, while the finest fruit produced in the States comes from the Limestone section up in Erie, Sandusky, and Ottawa Counties.

The largest kraut factory in the country is located at Clyde, Ohio, where they produce Holland Flat Dutch cabbage year in and year out with very good results. Therefore, Lime and Limestone performs an important function in promoting plant life by supplying plant food, by neutralizing soil acidity and by increasing the aeration which can grow Alfalfa and the clovers.

The cheapness of the material is such that it is within the reach of most any farmer, and he should have it and use it instead of hesitating to find out which is better.

It is all good and when you stop to consider that there are many Ohio Counties which have no lime at all it is time some of our farmers were finding out about the Lime question.

This can be done by writing the Agricultural Lime and Limestone Association, 306 Hartman Building, Columbus, Ohio.

New judgeships are created, even though judges now declare they have not enough work to keep them busy. Hereafter instead of taking from two to three months' vacation, these judges can now enjoy three or four months, and instead of working from 11 o'clock in the morning to four in the afternoon, when they work, they can now work from 12 to 1, take off an hour and a half for lunch and then quit at 3.

Extravagance has been apparent in every move at Albany this year. In Ohio, even in Pennsylvania, how different! Both Gov. Willis and Gov. Brumbaugh have sensed their responsibilities and they realize the taxpayers are in earnest about extravagance. The way the taxes and bond issues have been piling up in every state, is enough to make even the most hard-hearted politician shudder and wonder to what port we are drifting. I have pointed out these matters, not to compare but simply to commend the splendid man that Ohio has chosen to lead her people. Nothing is of such vast importance at this very time as men and measures to lessen this awful menace that piled up taxes threaten. Our heartiest congratulations to Gov. Willis for the example he is setting. What he is doing and has done is certain to result in reforms, not only in other directions within his own state, but in all directions in every state.—C. W. B.—From the American Agriculturalist June 5th, 1915.

Responsibility Ended.
The youngster's grandmother and aunt had been visiting him, Mrs. Homer Hoch of Marion relatives. He had been including them in his prayers saying God bless each of the immediate family and them also. The night of the day on which they left, he prayed his prayers as usual, in his usual way. "Oh, no, I forgot," he thought and said, "Oh, no, I forgot. Grandma and auntie are gone, so you needn't mind about them any more."—Kansas City Star.

The prosperity of a city is in direct proportion to the local pride. Where local pride runs high, prosperity has a firm foothold. Such a town is a good place to live and do business in. Paint helps to a remarkable degree in spreading an impression of prosperity throughout a community. It gives a fresh, new, inviting look wherever it is used. Municipal buildings, stores and homes feel its good effects. Growing business is bound to be one of the direct results of a liberal use of paint, not from any magic in the paint, but because of the pride which is stimulated.
